TSWebcam is an advanced tool that enables you to access webcames via a remote computer or Citrix server. The utility comes with a DirectX compatible image source and hence, it can support a vast array of applications, including media players, communication apps along with tools that demand a dedicated graphical card. The application is compatible with any Windows RDP or terminal service and does not need any special client to work properly. According to the developer, you do not need to install extra drivers as the app can register itself as a camera on the server side as a user mode driver. On a side note, the aforementioned drivers are commonly running inside a user session and do not impact the overall stability of the server in any way. Thanks to the built-in Virtual Channel technology, it can tunnel video streams via the current connection, so you do not need to worry about extra charges with the Internet bill. The application enables you to perform a few configuration settings, such as changing the resolution and
