Exported content is XLSX format (Microsoft Excel). CSV file is a text file that holds tabular data * If CSV file contains header row(s), * then it is exported to its XLSX-equivalent Excel file. * Header row is the first row in CSV file. * CSV files without a header row are not supported by the software. * If no file name is entered, then the software exports to XLS file. * Files are opened in Read Only mode. * Excel features can not be enabled. * Files are saved as xlsx-files. Jari Rannikko Senior Java Developer P.S. I have a copy of CSV To XLSX Convert Software 4.5 Ultimate Edition which allows you to convert all CSV's in sub directories without extra efforts (multiple CSV's listed under same directory). A: You can use SmartCSV to extract values from csv file to an excel file. According to this documentation SmartCSV is a powerful application which allows you to parse a tabular text format (such as comma-separated values, Sieve, Access, Sybase etc.) and convert it into a more palatable format. It supports several tasks such as extracting values from your tabular data and converting it into Excel or OpenOffice Calc spreadsheet and many other tasks. , the results for $\sqrt{\text{MAXMEM}}(8)$ were reported in [Larsson-2016]. With $S(\text{mathcal{X}})$ being large, $\sqrt{\text{MAXMEM}}(4)$ is comparable with $\sqrt{\text{TMOpt}}(4)$ for $S_d=2$ and S_3 , but is worse for $S_d=1$ and S_4 . The $\sqrt{\text{MAXMEM}}(8)$ is clearly better than $\sqrt{\text{TMOpt}}(8)$ for $S_d \leq 8$. It is also interesting to note the similarity between the results of [Larsson-2016] and our Table [tab:contour-3D] in $S_d=3$, with the same Stepsion_05 values.
