Help? - coryl Hey all, I'm looking for advice on how to market the MVP of my first product. Basically, I'm working on this thing, and I've built something that I think people will like. But I'm really concerned about what channel to advertise in. I mean I'm a developer, but I don't want to have a dead-end website that just gets people's email address, etc. Does anyone have experience building an MVP, marketing it effectively (i.e. defining core competencies, etc), and then raising capital? Any advice is greatly appreciated, thanks!

===== spooneybarger A solid MVP should be much more than what you will end up with as you will likely start by building something very minimal and iterate to a point where you could not tell if you were building the same product or not. That said, the best option for sales channels would really depend on whether you are going after B2B or B2C or both. For B2C there are clearly a lot of options. The big handful of the current options would be: \- Advertising in magazines (newspapers, etc.) \- Local TV \- Word of mouth (like people wanting to pay you to work with you or make a contribution to your project and offering compensation for that) \- Web "buzz marketing" such as making it on the top of Reddit or making a round on Hacker News or the like. For B2B you have a lot of options as
