Carte de Bucate Horia Varlan PDF [Application of soft tissue objective measurement system in maxillofacial surgery]. The anatomic forms and the biomechanical functional changes of the soft tissues are important for the surgical planning, preoperative planning and predicting the surgical outcome. Presently, the surgical outcome can be estimated by the physical measurements, such as the morphological analyses and the tissue elasticity analyses, as well as the geometrical analyses. However, the accuracy of the prediction of the clinical outcome is still poor. In this study, we compared the soft tissue objective measurements with the clinical outcomes. The results showed that the soft tissue objective measurements are useful in both facial analysis and surgical planning. However, compared to the clinical outcomes, the soft tissue objective measurements still have a drawback of the poor precision in the prediction of the surgical outcome. United States Naval Observatory The United States Naval Observatory (USNO) at the Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C. is the agency and facility that provides, through its official websites and non-official off-site sources, the official time and time zones that are used by all U.S. armed forces and most civilian and commercial organizations. Overview Established in 1854, the Naval Observatory provides official time and time zones to the Department of Defense, Federal Government, and the public, thereby serving as the U.S. Government's primary source for time. Through the Office of Naval Research, the Naval Observatory is also responsible for the Naval Chronology of World History, a comprehensive history of the world that illustrates the historical development of naval forces, navies, military technology and maritime culture from earliest times to the present. The agency houses the Distant Early Warning Line Satellite Tracking System, the Navy Navigation and Timing Group, and the Naval Institute. The Naval Observatory is accredited by the American Association of State and Local Education Agencies and subject to quality oversight by the U.S. Department of Education. Appointed civilian employees of the Naval Observatory work under the civil service systems of the United States Department of the Navy and the U.S. Department of Defense. When using uniformed military personnel, they are afforded the same pay and benefits as a military member in the same grade and branch.
