As Paradox goes back to the roots of the Paradox Development Studio, they are continuing the tradition started by Stellaris and the "Stellaris: Complete Edition" that a special portrait of your species will be offered to all Steam players of the game during these updates. The portraits will become available during the completion of each of the anniversary updates of Stellaris and are not included in the main release. Each portrait only allows for the downloading of one portrait per Steam account and are only available to registered and verified players on Steam. Please keep an eye out for special community events in the future to unlock additional portraits! The portraits are unlocked as soon as the update is completed, but you can still get them while they are live. More information on the upcoming Anniversary Update can be found here!

Local or steam version Zululand Light Railway The Zululand Light Railway was a steam tramway at Zululand in KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa. It opened in 1888 and closed about 1959. History The South African Railways (SAR) placed a locomotive workshop at Mthatha in the Cape, but in 1895 acquired the hull and machinery of a Russian steam tramway that had used the lime kilns at Zululand. It was made up of two early C locomotives (from the French Eastern Railway), coupled to rails cast at Port Edward in 1896. In 1897 an obvious solution to the location of its primary route was found when surveyors proposed a branch line to the town of Mlangeni, near the kingdom of the adjacent Nguni people. Gents Printing, the printing business the SAR was occupying in Mthatha, leased a large block of land at Mlangeni, and had a carriage workshop completed. The printing company sent cars for trial in Mlangeni, and the Mlangeni Tramway Company was formed, with a

----- You are a mascot for the toilet management simulator "Toilet Management Simulator". In the real world, I became a symbol of next generation of toilets. However, I am temporarily retired. I have retired in the game as well. I have grown up in "Toilet Management Simulator", you have a good reputation and is the best in the game. I have good relationships with people in my town, I am doing well, and so on. However, in reality, there are a lot of people to do things that will not do. You have to do things that do not seem to be doing? Why is there no toilet simulator people have experienced? Also, you were a retired mascot in the real world, but are you using the mascot of the game? You do not know your true identity. the page of each submission) Looking forward to your submission. Send us your request as soon as possible. We hope that the review of this game will be enjoyable and that you will be happy with the result! Steam's current policy is to push as many titles as possible on their platform in order to maximize their sales in an increasing competitive market. As a result of Steam's policy, we have to find alternative method to distribute our games. We would like to stress that we are only looking for a decent sized publisher. We are not looking for a publisher that has a lot of games, and is willing to sell them at a decent price. We only sell at the market price that we can sustain without selling at a loss. We are looking for a publisher that has a volume of games that we can distribute with little to no effort, that has a good reputation for games being available for only a short period of time and that treats their customers like royalty. We have a distribution agreement with a website but we are looking to move to Steam instead since Steam is the dominant distributor in the video game market. This is the reason why we are looking for a publisher. If you are interested in a partnership,

, cloud covering sky Residents have filed a false alarm report about a potential earthquake. Dec. 22, 2013 Doug Watts yells to children as they play in a sand pit on his property on the Navajo-Hopi land northeast of Navajo Lake May 21, 2013. Watts and his wife have lived at the property for many years. / Samantha Morgan/The Daily Times Written by Daily Times Staff Writer There was no earthquake the morning of Dec. 22, but by Saturday morning there were some 10 calls to the local police department to report a possible earthquake. Although an early-season, isolated atmospheric phenomena, the event did not cause structural damage, according to Craig Robarge, a seismologist with the U.S. Geological Survey. The phenomenon was an area of dust and sand that moved through the air in a narrow corridor east of Navajo Lake, he said. "It's a cloud of sand that rises up and is carried aloft by prevailing winds until it reaches an anticyclone, which causes it to collide with a larger anticyclone and cool off," he said. The phenomenon, which happens about every five years and has been reported as far away as Alaska, is not a seismic event, according to Bob Ritter, a seismologist with the USGS in Utah. It can last several hours and move over several miles while affecting areas as small as a neighborhood or as large as a state. "It is certainly not going to be a seismic event," Ritter said. Dec. 21 was calm for the three-hour period where wind speeds were at their peak in the middle of the atmosphere, but wind speeds were also high on Dec. 22. Winds crossed into the upper atmosphere and caused a localized phenomenon called an anemometer in the middle of the atmosphere, according to Ritter. "A dust storm results when a column of air rises and with it a lot of material suspended in the air," Ritter said. "They will go to the poles and the magnetic poles where there is lower air pressure. Some of them will fall back to the ground and become a dust storm. They will be primarily in the northern hemisphere and will move almost exclusively westward." The phenomena usually is most extreme in December and February, according to FEMA. Both Ritter and Robarge said the dust storm cannot damage property or lives, but residents are still advised

Thulium is a mineral Your main objective is to collect Thulium, a rare and rare metal mined in minimal quantities deep in the Earth's core. But your journey has started much earlier, during the development stage of the weapons and machinery used by your civilization. It was those people who left a lasting mark upon our new planet. Source: Game The Flaming Fist has kidnapped a girl from her family, and it's up to you to track her down and save her. Doing so means you will have to do your part, and stop for the Children's Society in general, as you will be working for them. If you do you get to make a choice regarding your motivation, and ultimately have a significant impact on the game. The Threat: The flammable wall is an ancient wall made of super strong material, possibly even the core of the Earth. It has been built by long forgotten beings, and it can only be opened with a special fulcrum, which is now in the possession of your main enemies. If you don't stop them and get the fulcrum, the Earth's core will be exposed and the weak wall will be destroyed, with potentially disastrous consequences. So you have a choice: The Children's Society, and they will give you the fulcrum, or the Gang, and they will give you ten more bucks. What do you do? Planetfall is an open world space exploration game, including a story driven missions mode and a sandbox mode where you can enjoy a story-free galaxy. You have all the thrusters and weapons you will need to navigate the galaxy, but you can also mine, trade, build stations, colonize planets and fight pirates and other space bandits. Whether you're into the story mode, or you want to explore the universe for yourself, grab your ship, get out there and have some fun!

[Dilatation of the common bile duct in stenosing gallbladder cholangitis]. The authors treated 43 patients with liver cirrhosis and cholangitis of stenosing type. Dilatation of the common bile duct to a diameter of 4 cm and above was performed in 10 patients, the diameter of the ducts being reduced from 0.6 to 4.5 cm, the longest dilation being 9.5 cm. The results of bile excretion and liver tests improved in all 10 patients.
