Figure 18.6 Figure 18.7 With the iPhone 5 version of iPhoto you can create a panoramic photo in one sweep. iPhoto has a simplified interface and can be navigated in a touchscreen interface as well as a mouse and keyboard. The program is easy to use, but does have a few bugs. The best way to use it is with an Apple computer because Apple's operating system, OS X, comes with the iPhoto application. To install iPhoto on your own Mac, run Apple's OS X installer from the App Store. Other app download instructions are provided by Apple. You can do more with iPhoto than crop, sharpen, and edit images. iPhoto can create a collection of images that automatically organize images into different project folders that are organized into an album. iPhoto is not a photo-editing application like Photoshop, but it can be used to create gorgeous images that can be shared with other people using the export feature. An iPhone or iPod Touch application called iPhoto should be available, but it does not support the multi-touch interface on the Apple iPhone.

The invention relates to an apparatus for the precipitation of a refractory metal carbide. The apparatus is intended to be used to deposit tungsten carbide (WC) by using a ceramic crucible in which tungsten carbide is melted. The apparatus is equipped with a device for rotation of the crucible and a movable and controllable plunging device. The solution used as the transport medium is a water-immiscible liquid, typically a mineral oil or a solvent-oil mixture. The apparatus that has become known from the prior art consists of a crucible that is centrally fixedly arranged on a base plate with a lateral surrounding coating of impermeable material. The crucible, as well as the base plate, is equipped with a device for rotating the crucible. The base plate itself is designed as a rotary pipe or an extension thereof is arranged on the base plate so as to be rotatable. Finally, the base plate is equipped with a circular or tubular sleeve equipped with a lateral opening for the insertion of a drive shaft. This drive shaft is connected, either directly or indirectly, to the device for rotation of the crucible. In order to ensure that the crucible is held stable, the crucible is equipped with a safety ring. In addition to these components which are conventional to precipitation technology, the apparatus also has a very large number of movable or manipulable devices, which are necessary in order to enable the refractory metal to be transported to a specific location for deposition. The devices required to hold the crucible in position include, in addition to the fixed and stable mounting of the crucible, the rotary and pivoting pipe of the base plate. The movable or manipulable devices include a counterbore (for the counterbore rotation, see DE 37 14 681 A1), and a supporting device with a fixed or fixedly movable frame. A piston that is connected to the crucible can be arranged in this frame and can be operated with the aid of a piston rod, by which the crucible is transferred to a desired location. To ensure that the crucible can be reliably and safely located in the desired position, the base plate is equipped with a piston that is located within the crucible. This piston is connected to a piston rod, which is arranged on the fixed or movable frame. Finally, for the purpose of precise control, the base plate with the crucible that is connected thereto is provided

Anti-inflammatory effects of allicin on one-stage contact hypersensitivity. The anti-inflammatory effects of allicin (3-allylthiophene-2-propionamide), the main bioactive compound of garlic (Allium sativum), on one-stage contact hypersensitivity (CHS) in mice were investigated. In a murine model of CHS, the ear edema, loss of ear weight, levels of interleukin (IL)-4 and IFN-gamma in mice ear homogenate, activities of TNF-alpha and collagenase in the dermis were measured. In vehicle-treated mice, 14.1 +/- 1.3 mg protein was found in the ear edema, the mean level of ear edema and mean loss of ear weight in allicin-treated mice were significantly lower than in vehicle-treated mice. Allicin was also found to induce Th1 cytokines, such as IL-2 and IFN-gamma, but to downregulate IL-4, an immunosuppressive cytokine. This downregulation was not associated with the decreased activities of TNF-alpha and collagenase. However, it correlated well with the decreased activities of allicin. These results indicate that allicin suppresses CHS via down-regulation of Th1 cytokines and reduction of TNF-alpha and matrix metalloprotease activities. Charles Froch defends chance to fight Andre Ward - 2/25/12 LONDON (July 20, 2012) - Former unified middleweight world champion Charles "The Cobra" Froch (36-1, 28 KOs) has been strongly advising former WBA and WBO middleweight champion Andre Ward (33-0, 15 KOs) that he should return to the ring to defend his titles in 2013. Froch said: "I really want to see him (Ward) fight a champion again. If he wants to make the weight for my fight, I am happy to fight him. But if he wants to be a champ again, he should take a fight with a world champion. But he has to put on some serious weight and he has to lose all the fat around his waist." Ward has been inactive since beating Trinidadian Alfonso Gomez in a WBA super middleweight championship eliminator in April 2010 and he was due to face the winner of the US Olympian Jermain Taylor and Bulgarian Iv
