" I need to somehow apply the awk variables to the file named "1" and "2". I was thinking of something like awk '/{if(line~/ .{$1}/){if(++:ge){print i}else{print ""}}' fi. I cant seem to get it working though, any help would be greatly appreciated A: The best approach I've found when dealing with output from multiple Unix tools is to redirect the output to a file which is then handed to your text processing tool. In this case, I'd use a bash script of the following form: #!/bin/bash while read -r -d $' ' f; do echo $f done &- is automatically redirected to a file with the name FILES, for example: echo "1" >&- # same as: ./processor.sh EDIT: I've also updated the script above to handle file1.txt and file2.txt. It will emit three lines if both files are successfully processed. Of course, you can change this as required. Q:
