Dairy milk samples obtained from a local dairy were processed by high-pressure homogenisation (HPH) (100 MPa) at 20, 30, 40, 50, 60 and 70 degrees C (for 15 s, at the pressure applied). After heating, the samples were added to reconstituted milk (pH=6.3) which had been buffered to pH 7.0. The L/I ratio of reconstituted milk after HPH was compared to the non-HPH treated milk samples. While the L/I ratio decreased with increasing pressure, it increased with increasing temperature. The HPH treatment with 40 degrees C appeared to be the most suitable, as the effect on L/I ratio was minimal.NHL 2016 Draft season is here and we've got a mock draft for you. We've got our 11 overall selection, our seven rounds, the USNTDP top prospect in each round and the top prospect in each of the seven rounds. Everything is ranked in order from top to bottom and we've got a little insight into why we chose the prospect we did. The Draft is Thursday, June 24. 11TH overall pick: Brock Boeser, RW, University of North Dakota Why he'll go in the top 10: Boeser, a 6'2 centre, is an amazing skater with great vision and a good point shot. He is great at picking up loose pucks and blowing past defenders with speed and skill. He is a very capable playmaker and would be one of the better two-way centres in the draft if he wasn't playing in college
