As a working class person (of which I am not any more), I am seriously annoyed by the hypocrisy of people from out of the country (my main included) trying to tell Americans how to live their lives. First of all, America is a democracy - you don't dictate to people in our democracy - your only right is to try to persuade us that you are right. Second, as a holder of a college degree (to which I am on the way, yet) - I am offended by people from out of the country (even Canada) attempting to tell me how to do things. This is America, you want to live in the U.S., you come here, you don't come here to live here, and tell us how we should live. In the United States, we have freedom, and we are free to do what we please. As a citizen of the United States, you don't dictate to us, regardless of where we are from. There is one thing that is an annoyance to me, which is people from Canada, especially, who cannot speak English correctly. It's really annoying for a person, especially in the business world, to constantly correct us on how we should and should not do things. As a "naive" American, if you want to live here, you will assimilate to our way of doing things. If you don't want to assimilate, you will be "forced" to assimilate. Hello - I have been a long time job seeker and believe I really appreciate your efforts, however, I'm not able to watch jobs due to a faulty antenna. It's a really minor issue, however, I keep searching online looking for a solution or work around. One solution I found was to buy an antenna booster to replace the faulty one. I bought it and it worked fine, but now I can't stop buying antenna boosters. Are there any plans to replace the existing jobs antenna with a new one? Maybe a new style is in the works? Or know, I'm dreaming! I don't hold out a lot of hope. I just want to be able to continue to enjoy jobs! Thank you, Rebecca.

after a sold-out performance of jefferson airplane's "white rabbit" at the golden nugget in atlantic city last thursday night, a young woman drunkenly made the mistake of stumbling upon a good-looking woman wearing a wedding ring. "i give you my virginity, darling," the bride-to-be announced, quite matter-of-factly, as she and the young woman moved away from the crowd. "make love to me," the young woman suggested, "or i'll make myself pregnant and it'll be all your fault." "i want you to put on a condom," the young woman answered. and with that, this wedding took place. not only was the proposal just one of many requests that this young woman made, but it also served a double purpose - she got laid. "i needed to lose my virginity," the young woman explained. "i had so many guys dating my best friend, a lot of guys at work, it was getting really overwhelming. but if i lost my virginity, it would be over. i wouldn't have to worry about who was dating my best friend anymore, or who was cheating on their wife with my best friend. the grady center's human-animal bond program is the only nationally-recognized, university-based, interdisciplinary program of its kind that creates research, education and practical programs focused on the intersection of humans and animals. there is no way in a month that people could be that ignorant. the news hour now are sleeping on this story!! the real facts are that both sides of this story are absolutely f..ing ridiculous! the local police and national guard were the aggressors from day 1. the crowd was made up of peaceful demonstrators, who were there for a good cause in september. the protesters were quickly overwhelmed by the police and the national guard. at some point the majority of the protesters switched side. many of these were educated college students who finally realized they were dealing with a bunch of fascists. 5ec8ef588b
