The Kremlin leaders have been obsessed with the "Destabilization" of the United States and with the "Recapture" of the Russian Empire. Such a goal can be achieved in only two ways: either to make the United States collapse and retreat or to destroy it from within. They are not in a conflict with the West/United States. Rather, they are opposed to the corrupt and evil West/United States, which is well aware of their treasonable behavior and intentions. [2] The West/United States is in a state of war with the Kremlin. For the first time in Russian military history, there is a strategic leader that has a goal to defeat the United States. This has been the stated foreign policy goal since the enactment of the 1992 Presidential decree "On Strategic Goals of the Armed Forces of the Russian Federation". [5] While there was a brief period in the early 1990s when the U.S. had sufficient military power to win a war against the Soviet Union, these capabilities have now been lost. While Russia may be able to overcome the U.S., to do so, it must first remove the U.S. from the continent of Eurasia. In the HQ Karl obtains documents outlining Vahlen's plan for the seizure of the Suez Canal and the Arabian oil fields in order to end a military stalemate. Vahlen will commandeer the Ratte, and use it to fight the Allies for the oil resources. To get there, Vahlen will head to the Suez Canal, where General Oster has seized a British section. However, to prevent the Allies from taking control of the canal, Vahlen will destroy the Egyptian and French fortifications. In exchange for Vahlen being allowed to retain the Ratte for German use, he will use the Ratte to attack the British siege positions. Upon gaining control of the Ratte, Vahlen will head to the Siwa Oasis. If he successfully destroys the British, French and US strongholds, he will secure the area and then move the Ratte to the Middle East. After the Ratte is placed in the middle of the canal, the bridge will collapse, creating a massive obstacle. Vahlen has also been using the Allies' fear of the Ratte to his advantage. When U-234 approaches the Ratte, the Allies will order a barrage of air strikes. The Allies will hope that the destruction of the Ratte will relieve the pressure on the bridge. They will then lead a Russian contingent of the forces of General Oster to assist in the assault on the Ratte and seize the oil. Vahlen will then use the Ratte to eliminate the Russian air force. After defeating the Russian forces, the Ratte will crash into the bridge, fracturing the Iron Curtain and securing Vahlen's victory.

After the Battle of Pskov in 1710, the Pskov Raskolniki expanded their community. In the 1700s, the Raskolniki formed the Zemstvo of Pskov, which became the local government. The Raskolniki, or Russian Nobles, seized theskii estats and three vоеvodships from the heretofore all-Russian boyar nobility. Holy Synod (Church of Russia) forced the rest of the secular clergy to become Protestant, and, by 1740, 100,000 Russian Orthodox clerics were Protestant. Religious schism (the Dukhan of Smolensk) removed all Cossack priests from the church and required them to take an oath not to preach; this incensed the Cossacks, who spread discontent among the clergy. After the Russo-Swedish War (1741-1743), Russia had adopted the Protestant Union of the Northern Cities as a model. At the end of the battle of Poltava in 1709, many in Russia's nobility changed their religious affiliation from Orthodoxy to Lutheranism, while many others did so over the following years. In 1711, the ranks of the nobility increased at the expense of the clergy, while the commercial class remained relatively unchanged. Not only is therearecoercive programs in place, but theyhave even begun to target minors. Last year, a Russian website, FREESPORTS, published a video showing how its children were being taught about Ukrainian history in English. At one point, the video shows a Russian child training on a toy rifle before ordering her to shoot an MPV, which is a Ukrainian-made armored vehicle. Beyond the obvious manipulation of image and the imposition of the Kremlin narrative, the propaganda campaign against Russia is centered on misinformation. The Kremlin's narrative centers on attacks against the West and the United States as being responsible for the chaos and violence in the Ukraine. A contributing factor of this information warfare is that the Kremlin maintains an active disinformation campaign of its own. RT.com reports that the Kremlin itself provides training for people in the Ukraine to spread misinformation with the aim of driving the Ukrainian people away from the West.30 RT, or perhaps more correctly the Russian government-owned RT-Channel, has launched an aggressive campaign to discredit the West and discredit the West's news source, the New York Times.³¹ how to change language from russian to english sniper elite v2 What is particularly sinister is that as they are murdering and intimidating their way to taking power, the Ukrainian militants have turned to foreign media to gain support and influence. In February 2014, the newly elected Prime Minister, Arseniy Yatsenyuk, former member of Yulia Tymoshenko's "Bribo" party, started a campaign of hate against Russia. He expelled Russia's ambassador from Ukraine in response to its takeover of Crimea. He quickly shifted his position to also blaming the United States for the crisis. One can only assume that if he had not blamed the West, his new party would not have grown as quickly as it has. 5ec8ef588b
