Adobe has brought the Lens correction technology, which is also present in the Adobe Lightroom and the Bridge apps, to the Photoshop app. So, once again, you are given the opportunity to repair crooked photos caused by misalignment on the lens, dust, scratches and other lens errors. There are three ways to spot Lens errors: Lightroom can so that automatically; the Bridge app can detect Lens errors and notify you if there are any by way of a filter icon; and the Photoshop app can show Lens errors in layers. Although the majority of the manual says you can use a metal door for a tripod, which is very dangerous, if you really want to get a quality shot you should invest a few extra dollars. I spent a while reading around and came to the conclusion that the best brands to look for are Printer, for their adjustable legs, and Gorilla, for their expensive but reliable range of tripods. If you get the quality 800 lbs Gorilla tripod, this is the safest, most reliable, and best investment you will ever make for you image collection because it's quality is incredible. That's why I recommend it. Here's a link for the Gorilla 800 Video. e3d0a04c9c
